- A. Toolbar. Login/out, click to update account settings. Global Admin dropdown menu.
- B. Global Navigation. Each text link leads to specific "landing page," arrows hint that there's also a drop down menu for quick selection.
- C. Breadcrumbs. Not present on initial page (shown for placement).
- D. Page Header.
- E. Timeframe (X-Axis). By default, shows the most recent 2 weeks of data.
- F. Chart. Tabbed interface to show either "Participants" or "Traffic." If traffic is shown, the option to select MO, MT, or all traffic (default). In this example, only 1 week is shown (planned timeframe is 2 weeks). Also in this example, a hover state for 1 April is shown.
- G. Current Campaigns. Tied into the chart featured above, this table shows 9 most recent campaigns (mixed MSO/Campaign Types) along with "big picture" values—Participants and Traffic. The H2 header is a link to the Campaigns landing page and each campaign is linked to that particular campaign's page. Also, a shortcut to create a new campaign from the front page—presented best with an informative tooltip on the hover state.
- H. Create New Campaign "button." A text link with small icon used throughout the site as a shortcut for creating a new campaign.
- I. News. Serves as a place for information such as system maintenance, best practices, case studies, etc.

1.0.2 Campaign Overview - Filtered Results

A. Filter results breakdown. Here, we show feedback of what was filtered. If the filtered results produce an unfavorable result, this gives the user a snapshot of how they filtered (and how to adjust). In the case of a favorable filter, it gives reassurance they are looking at exactly what they initially wanted.

1.3.1 Create New Campaign: Edit/Error

The form elements below the Campaign Type selector reflects the currently selected campaign type (in this case, mTalk). It should hold the data entered by the user in the case that they choose a different campaign type. The form elements will change according to the new campaign type, but the previously filled out fields should be maintained.

- A. Error-checking. Rather than displaying form errors after the user submits the form, they can be displayed directly to the right of the form elements.
- B. The Keyword and Short Code fields have the ability to Add and additional keyword or short code—shown as a textlink directly to the right.
- C. Form Hints. Having a small, informative icon next to key form elements would be helpful to assist in filling out the best possible choices to maximize results in a particular campaign. This could be executed by either a tooltip or overlay.
- D. Add Sponsor link. This could either be a selection in the dropdown menu or a seperate link next to the dropdown menu.

4.2 Tools: Manage Mobile Number

Here we have the result page from a previously entered mobile number (with the ability to enter another number still present).

The initial option is to remove the User from all campaigns using all shortcodes.

Then, the admin can select which particular campaigns to remove the User from, grouped by short code. Each short code grouping has an initial checkbox for removing the User from all campaigns using that particular shortcode.

Once the "Remove Selected" button has been submitted, there should be a "Are you sure" pop-up to be on the safe side. Then, once the results are refreshed, we could even display a menu stating what action was taken, with a last chance to Undo.

Example:

212-555-1234 was removed from:

62582

Apple Club (#12267, applexyz123)

...still searching for a good name for this section. At any rate, it can be a place for various kinds of informational articles: system maintenance, best practices, tutorials, case studies, etc.

It might be helpful to use a "weblog-like" format to keep the interface somewhat recognizable. Also, I think it would be smart to break down these "articles" into categories and arranging a few of the most important ones in the right column.

A. Tags Sidebar. Either using color or text size to determine the tag's "weight." In this case, using color (dark to light connotes more activity to less activity).

6.0 Support

It might be useful to establish a 1,2,3 method for getting help:

1. Manual
2. Support Topics
3. Contact mSnap Support

The word "Support" is a bit more empowering and conducive to this 1,2,3 method than using "Help."

However, I do want to get a better understanding of how you provide support to your users.

- A. Introduce the hierarchy of support.
- B. Make the first line of defense extremely visible with a large button.
- C. I would also consider a contact form rather than an e-mail link. Making them work a little harder by filling out a form could possibly influence them to explore the Support Topics before getting in direct contact with your support staff. Not sure if a mailing address is even necessary.

Note: Also might be helpful to have a glossary of terms.

6.1 Support: Topics

Here is a more simplified "Support Topics" interface. By keeping only the essential top-level information, it makes it easier for a user to scan for what they're looking for. A search function might be useful as well.
